It's a straight path

The NLU campus has undergone another change, but just a minor one. From now on students will not have to trudge through the mud to reach the Administration Building, Sandel Library or Gunby Dining Hall.

Independent plays set performances

Two independent theatre productions, both seeking to provoke thought on a certain issue, are currently the endeavor of several Northeast students, faculty and alumnae.

Both plays are being staged off campus at religious facilities in the city of Monroe. Both were planned mainly by two young directors, Roosevelt Wright and Jerilyn Gilstrap.

Wright is directing and acting in a black drama dealing with the problems of blacks in a modern society entitled "Earth and Stars." The play is being staged at the Greater New Hope Baptist Church, July 28; Segam's Community Baptist Church, July 30 and Antioch Baptist Church, July 31. Performance time is 7:30 p.m. No admission will be charged, but donations are solicited, stated Wright.

Miss Gilstrap is directing, "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," a play written by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, at the Wesley Foundation. The play is being staged for the public Sunday and Monday at 8 p.m. Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Critical service rates Pow Wow 'excellent'

The National Newspaper Service NNS) rated the spring semester editions of the Pow Wow "A+"," the highest rating awarded by the critical service.

In its critique of the student newspaper, NNS judge E.P. Mills commended the Pow Wow for its coverage of the Northeast campus. The Pow Wow is an "excellent college newspaper which shows careful editing by a well-trained staff," he said.

Other comments were made about the layout of the pages, contents of the editorial page, and news judgment exercised by the spring staff.

Students aid profs

Three biology majors have been chosen to assist Northeast biology professors in laboratory research. The undergraduates students are working as assistants to the professors on various projects.

According to Dr. Earl Prince, head of the Department of Biology, the three students were chosen by the biology faculty on the basis of outstanding academic achievement.

Dr. Prince listed the students as Jerry Lyles, a senior from Monroe who will be working with Dr. David T. Kee, associate professor; Tommy Edmends, a junior from Minden who will work with Dr. Russell A. Normand, assistant professor, and Patricia Ryder, a junior from Deville, who will be working with Dr. William W. Norris.

Research conducted

Dr. Ronald E. Smith, associate professor of physics, is conducting sum-mer research at the Army Research Lab at the Picatinny Arsenal in Dover, N. J.

The project, which is under the sponsorship of the College Science Improvement Program of the National Science Foundation, deals with electron para-magnetic resonance. Smith, who has been a faculty member at Northeast since 1966, will return in the fall.

Smith received his B. S., M. S. and Ph.D. in physics from Texas A & M.

Lab work canceled

The new program of laboratory experiences begun by the College of Education was terminated for this semester because of the closing of public schools during the summer, according to Herman Sigler, coordinator of the project.

The program is designed to give future teachers a stronger foundation for their careers. The steps of the work involves classroom visits, classroom and related involvement, and class planning and instruction. This program will supplement the present student teaching program which takes place during the student's senior year.

Northeast art exhibits compete in New Orleans

Dr. James B. Edwards, head of the Department of Art, has announced that two art faculty members and one art student have had works accepted in competition in the fifth annual juried exhibition, sponsored by the Louisiana Crafts Council of New Representing NLU in the exhibition was Edward E. Schutz, assistant professor in printmaking with an etching entitled "Popular Poplar," "Pennchant Peanut Plot" and a woodcut entitled "La Fouche Landscape.

Dennis L. Mitchell, instructor in ceramics, also represented NLU with a stoneware hand-built covered storage jar and a stoneware wheel-thrown casserole, Dr. Edwards said

The student entry in the exhibition was made by John E. Quade, senior ceramics major from Minden, who entered a stoneware hand-built container and stoneware wheel-thrown vase.

The works will be jurored by Cynthia Bringle, craftsman-trustee of the Southeast Region of the American Crafts Council, Dr. Edwars said

Paintings displayed in Meridian Museum

William M. Watkins, director of the Meridian Museum of Art in Meridian, Miss., announced that a NLU art instructor has been invited to present a one-man exhibition of paintings at the museum during the forthcoming academic year.

Robert G. Ward, assistant professor in painting, will display recent acrylic figurative paintings in the Meridian Museum of Art East Gallery during Ward is a practicing and exhibiting artist as well as being professor in charge of the sequence of painting courses at NLU, where he instructs all graduate and undergraduate offerings in oil and acrylic painting. The artist is professionally represented by The Arkansas Arts Center Gallery in Little Rock and the Brooks Memorial Art Gallery in Memphis. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Masur Museum of Art in Monroe.

Haynes speaks

"Our state is keeping pace nationally in legislating and adopting new trends for special education," members of the National Consortium for Humanizing Education were told Tuesday.

Dr. Levelle Haynes, director of the Special Education Center at Northeast, spoke on the state organization for treating the special education student. He was the second education specialist in a series designed to bring consortium participants up to date on child learning and development

Citing Dr. James Perry of the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory in Austin-a participant in a recent national meeting a Houston-Dr. Haynes mentioned trends toward which special education is going.

First was expanded legislation for the handicapped child, a point Dr. Haynes said Louisiana was implementing currently. Also were the trends to move the individual child back to the regular classroom situation, precision teaching methodology and more emphasis on evaluation of success in reaching goals with the exceptional child.

He added that special education is leaning away from: 1) limited service, 2) labeling the child, and 3) traditional school programs. Nationally, the trend is toward recognizing the exceptional child as "a being with human dignity, with well-defined rights and with genuine capacity for growth, Dr. Haynes said and with genuine capacity for growth," Dr. Haynes said.

Meeting attended

Thurman I. Potts, head of the NLU department of building construction attended the Building Officials Association of Louisiana, Board of Directors Conference held recently in Baton Rouge. Potts said the purpose of the conference was to emphasize the educational programs in use in the building construction field and the need to develop other programs in the educational program.

NLU is the acting agency of BOAL in the development of pilot programs in the Department of Building Construction, Potts said.

Dr. Kapp explains that "Girls will be accepted in the curriculum but must be screened because emploment is very competitive for such glamorous career. He, then, wrote to the airlines, asking about the demand. The shortage of well trained airline stewardesses was tremendous, according to Dr. Kapp.

"With all this together, we decided to get one started. Now, our first student, Michelle, has enrolled," says Dr. Kapp.

Issues play lead role in elections

With the Democratic presidential nominating convention, recently concluded and with the Republican convention scheduled to begin soon we find this an opportune time to look at the issues which we feel will play a major role in the November election.

Before we begin, we wish to remind our readers that the staff does not support any particular candidate. While each staff member has his or her own political convictions, these views are not intended to be expressed in this editorial.

Although some say it is becoming a dead issue, many feel the Vietnam war is very much alive. There are numerous questions connected with the war, such as when will U.S. troops be pulled completely out, what will happen to the prisioners of war and what will be the accomplishments of war once it is over.

Presently the U.S. is withdrawing its troops, peace talks are taking place (as to the usefulness of them, that is another issue) and American casualities have decreased during the past months. Determining if these are just political moves of a temporary nature is not for us to say. The fact remains that some progress has been made, but there is still much more to do.

Secondly, this country is one big mess-literally. The pollution problem has gotten to the point where the jokes which we use to laugh at are now hitting a little closer to home. The rivers and lakes are dying, the blue skies are turning a dull shade of grey and it's getting so you can't see good old mother earth for all the junk lying around.

So, if any candidate promises to make a clean sweep of things-literally that isthen we suggest he be given a closer look.

Some say the economy is in a slump or sagging a little. If that slump gets any lower there may not be an economy. The problems of a free enterprize, capitalistic society are many and very complex, so whoever is elected to sit in the White House is going to have his hands full, with just this one problem.

Now whoever is elected president is going to be faced with a serious problem. And that is getting to Washington in time for the inauguration. He might run into the problem of having a plane which is late, stacked up over the airport or managed to make a wrong turn somewhere and wind up in Cuba or some other nice out-of-the-way spot.

We think the problem of transportation speaks for itself, so we will leave it at

Now we come to a group of problems which can be lumped together under the heading of "social problems." These include, the welfare system, low cost housing, race relations, equality in education, penal reforms and the health problems. Actually there are a lot more problems in this area, but space does not even permit us to list them, let alone comment about them.

In fact we are not really sure if we want to get involved in any type of discussion about this small list. Again the problems are complex and the solutions are hard to

So far we have presented a long list of topics which we feel will be issues in the upcoming presidential campaign. We have offered no solutions. This is because we have none. We wish we did, but we don't. We, like everybody else, can only point to the problem and say, "Ok, here's the problem now you solve it."

From the topics we have presented here, it is easy to see that whoever is elected in November is going to have his work cut out for him. Frankly, it is sometimes hard to understand why anybody would want the job. The pay isn't that great, the best a person can hope for is eight years on the job and whoever is elected will be the blunt of much criticism and very little praise.

In conclusion we wish merely to state that the job is demanding, the issues complex and the work almost impossible. So when the youth of the nation go to the polls for the first time ever in a presidential election, we ask and hope they will use their vote carefully. The young voter should not allow himself to be swayed by emotionalism, or by a wave of popular sentiment. Instead we feel he should look at the issues at hand, understand them to the best of his ability then vote for the person who he thinks can meet the challenge successfully.

Communication works two ways

When the first summer session began we made a policy statement on this page which said in part, "we are here to serve the student body as an organ of communication; we have no other objective."

But a problem has arisen, communication is a two-way process. If we don't hear from you, the students, then the cycle of communication is incomplete.

Simply stated we want to hear from you. If we make a mistake, tell us about it. If we do something you like, tell us about it. If you have an idea that you think might be a possible Pow Wow story, please share it with us. And if there are any who want to make their views known to the entire student body about a particular issue we encourage you to write a letter to the editor.

There has been some response from students during the past weeks but we would like to have more.

'Earth and Stars'

It is said that drama had undergone its renaissance with the rising of the dark ages. While this statement may be true in part, it is now apparent that the renaissance was not the only age to see a drama revival. A black director and a group of actors have begun a drama revival of their own and from all indications, it promises to be as big as the one that took place over a thousand years ago.

The revival takes the form of a play produced and cast mostly by NLU students entitled "Earth and

'The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail'

The name Jerilyn Gilstrap may not ring a bell with most people, but to a group of talented actresses and actors and the Wesley Foundation, the name bears a great deal of meaning.

Jerilyn Gilstrap, seeking to take advantage of a summer lull in campus and city drama productions and also seeking to evoke a little thought on a controversial issue, is currently directing "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail."

"I wanted to direct this particular play because of the issues involved, and because although the events took place over a hundred years ago, the issues are still with us today," said Miss Gilstrap.

The play is being staged for the public Sunday Monday at 8 p.m. at the Wesley Foundation. Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. A special staging will be given Saturday night for a group sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunities.

The production is the brainstorm of Miss Gilstrap, who received the cooperation of Rev. Jim Wilson and the donated facilities Wesley Foundation. Miss Gilstrap stated that there was no trouble in filling the 15-member cast, but there have been numerous cast changes. "These players have had to work under the utmost strain by having to work in new roles almost every week," said Miss Gilstrap.

The play was written by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee and has been performed in numerous resident, community and university theatres throughout the United States. Special arrangements of the Wesley production are with Samuel French, Inc. Dr. George C. Brian of the NLU Speech Department aided in the production by making equipment available and helping with the battle scene that is completely pantomined.

Forrest Fairley, senior speech major, plays the leading role of Henry David Thoreau, famed practitioner and author of transcendentalism. The play carefully interjects the life and acquaintances of Thoreau in short sequences with a night he spent in jail for refusal to pay his taxes.

John D. Livingston is cast in the role of Bailey, the illiterate that Thoreau teaches to write his name while in the jail cell. Julie Green plays the part of Ellen Sewell, a girl Thoreau falls in love with.

Mrs. Neliwyn Bickley plays the part of the mother of Thoreau, while Leonard Miller is cast in the role of John, brother of Thoreau. Donnie McCaa plays the part of Sam, the sheriff who places Thoreau in jail for refusal to pay his taxes.

Chuck Fuller plays in the role of Deacon Ball, head of the Concord School Board. Booker Hall plays a runnaway slave, Williams, who Thoreau persuades to be his own man and later gives him the name of Henry Williams, a free man.

Other parts are played by Jeff Hendrix, as the farmer, and Pam Church, as a woman. Miss Church was the designer of the program and advertising. Sound technician is Pete Parish and lighting effects are by Doug Pauli, Hendrix, and Donnie Mc Caa

Special Effects

In commenting on the direction of the play, Miss Gilstrap, stated, "We have chosen to do the play much in the vein of Thoreau's philosophy of "Simplify! Simplify!' When a play is of excellent structure, it doesn't need all the accounterments of a production.

"Because of the timelessness of the ideas involved, we have removed the play from the dimension of Thoreau's lifetime and are presenting it as happening now. Instead of depending upon the use of props, the actors must make further use of their creative ability through pantomine. The actors' job is again made more difficult as they are deprived of the aid of period costumes. In our removal of the play from a specific time, we do not rely upon a set that would depict any specific period," added Miss Gilstrap.

She feels that in this theatrical experience the audience must employ his imagination and the result is much more challenging than a "realistic production." Miss Gilstrap stated that the group was confined to a large room not designed for any style of theatrical event and this provided a slight handicap, that may turn out to be an advantage in

Machines add new ways to test skill

In an age in which men say, "You're as young as you feel," skill has become the measure of testing people-men and women alike- and an instrument for maintaining healthy bodies.

Among the originators of new health programs is an NLU staff of inventors, builders, educators and researchists who are proposing class and gym aids that will no doubt revolutionize testing procedures.

Machines are now helping tennis and badminton athletes to carry on their practice sessions without the old headache of having to retrieve the ball that's been swatted over the net.

But things have improved even more than that around the H.&P.E. classes. Motors have been added to the machines to allow operation without manual

The man responsible for these innovations is Dr. Barry Johnson, head of the department. The brief stage of mechanization in NLU's history has been boosted along by three graduate students, Charles Prestidge, Mike Recio and presently working on a pitchout, developing a badminton ap- and hit-so long as there are paratus with the same type of birds in the basket.

In all, there are four machines: the regular tennis and badminton; the motor model; the junior model for youngsters; and the volleyball apparatus, adapted to aid the "spiker."

In using the volleyball setup, one loads the machine with a ball while the spiker awaits its release from above his head. When the ball falls, the player gets a chance to prove his skill by 'spiking," or slapping it across the net with increased speed.

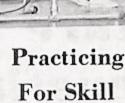

The volleyball machine can throw the ball over the net at sharp angles to allow practice on

The junior model is a smaller one than the tennis and badminton apparatus, and has its own special net. Youngsters can use it for catching and accuracy.

When the ball is dropped from above, small children try and catch it and throw for accuracy at target areas laid off on the net

For those adults who don't mind doing a little extra work while practicing their tennis and badminton, the machines can be loaded manually. But the motor model allows the player to load a Prestidge and Recio are basket with balls or birdies, whichever may be the choice or "smash" test. Lowry is and then load and hit, and load

Students and faculty at Northeast should consider their audience before placing items of news about events on campus, announced Gerald C. Stone, News Bureau director

"The News Bureau is an ad-ministrative office of the university concerned with providing news to off-campus plained that his department keeps area newspapers, television and radio stations abreast of campus happenings. "Our work is primarily getting news about students back to their hometown newspapers, but we also do articles and pictures for magazines, brochures, newsletters and daily and weekly papers throughout a three-state area and the nation," he said.

'The Sports Information Director, Bob Anderson, functions in a similar manner for all intramural and varsity events and players.'

Stone said he often receives information for dissemination to faculty and students at Northeast, and notifies the Pow Wow through its editor or a staff member. "The Pow Wow is the proper medium for reaching most of the University populace," Stone said, adding, occasionally the Pow Wow receives information that would not concern its readers, but would concern the general public, and it passes this news along to the News Bureau. In this way the two cooperate but serve independent functions.'

Cooperation extends to any news gathering event where duplication would be wasteful, but for most news items, contacting the proper campus medium will insure prompt coverage

The News Bureau and Pow Wow share a photography pool, some office space and some reporters, but, because the Pow Wow is the student voice of the University, much of its content is not in a realm of interest to offcampus readers.

The News Bureau, Stone said, is available to students and faculty throughout the year, whereas the Pow Wow only has some 33 issues annually.

He suggested persons or groups wishing news coverage should contact either the News Bureau or the Pow Wow as soon as they learn of a coming activity, or as soon as they know the outcome of an event. "Timeliness," Stone said, "can make or break a news story. Like the caterer for a banquet, a news team needs prior notification to do the best job."

Dancers, twirlers invade Northeast

The second annual Dance and Drill Team Camp and the third annual Twirlers Camp were hosted by the School of Music this week, according to Dr. Richard A. Worthington, head of the Music Department.

The Dance and Drill Team Camp's Director of Instruction was Mrs. Jane Dotson, director of NLU Warbonnets for the past six vears. Assisting her were Debbie Craft, 1972-73 captain of the Warbonnets, Linda Lastowsky, Miss Northeast Louisiana University, 1970-71, Ann Wilder, co-captain of the Warbonnets, and Terri Richardson, member of the Warbonnets.

Sixteen high schools and junior high schools were represented at the camp. Participants were instructed in dance-drill patterns and pom-pom drill, with students participating in the creation of dance routines, in the fundamentals of proper pom-pom routines and in the use of accessories with dance drills.

"It's a good experience for the girls, and I hope they learn some things that will be helpful to them in their drillteam work," said Miss Craft.

The Twirling Camp offered instruction with skills being developed in one baton, two batons, and three baton. It also featured twirling, strutting, fire baton, hoop knives, dance twirl, and drum majoring.

Director of Instruction for the camp was Rick Lowry, nationally known twirler and instructor. Also instructing were Nancy Meyer, Sharon Sturdivent, and Karen Sturdivent.

Nine schools were represented at the camp, including NLU.

Spring Pow Ww receives top rang

The Pow Wow has earned the seems to benething for highest rating given by a major newspaper critical service, which cited the student newspaper as an "excellent college newspaper which shows careful editing by a well-trained National Newspaper Service (NNS) of Memphis, Tenn., rated the Pow Wow's spring editions "A". The mark is given to a limited number of generally excellent newspapers which stand out for freshness. imagination, personality," according to N.S. Patterson, director of the critical service.

Kathy Myrick, spring semester editor and now a staff writer for the Monroe News-Star, termed the rating "great," saying the hard work of the staff had paid

She received her B.A. in English, with a journalism minor, in May.

Other spring semester staff members were Martha Priest. managing editor (B.A. in journalism in May); Pierce McKeithen, sports editor; Charles Haddox, news editor; Pat Mathias (B.A. in education with journalism minor in May), and Alison Crenshaw copy editors.

Pow Wow faculty advisor Bob A. Carroll said he was "well pleased" with the evaluation of the Pow Wow. "The judges rated the Pow Wow as an excellent newspaper, and pointed out a few weak places where we will attempt to improve," he said.

Among the comments made by veteran MNS judge E.P. Mills, who evaluates most college newspaper entries, were:

-"The Pow Wow is an attractive college newspaper which apparently does a good job of covering the campus. There everyone.'

"The edit page is excellent...they written on subjects whicould interest student reader

-"Your letto the editor show that studeave a voice.'

-"Hard newhe Pow Wow shows a nicese of news values. Scant e is given to events of the labout which most readers ably already know, whereaming events receive major ition."

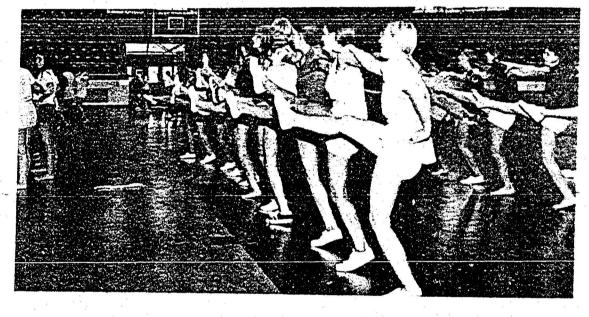

-"Some of spage layouts are superb. Younever in a rut as new layout s seem to be utilized in eache."

Suggestions : by Mills, a retired newsp. editor and journalism ter at the University of Fon, were for more interpretanews stories and additional von headlines.

This spring we first time the Pow Wow hiked NNS for a critique and g. As in past semesters, thew Wow has entered the Associated Collegiate Pressing service and expects a que back in late September.

The ACP honsistently ranked the Powy among the best college ne pers in the nation, giving First Class ratings during rt years. The highest rating gby ACP is All American, whice Pow Wow earned almost e semester as a junior college spaper and several times du its 20 years as a major colloublication.

While the rais fine and helps to keep moup, it is the comments from judges with which we are mnterested," Carroll said om these comments we kn/hat outside professionals we are doing right andat we are doing wrong.
